

Genealogical Society of Marion County

Presents:

Quaker Records

Thomas Hamm, Director of Special Collections and
Professor of History, Earlham College

Professor Hamm will present an introduction to using Quaker records for genealogical purposes. It will include a brief overview of Quaker history as well as examples of the various types of Quaker records.

Saturday, January 14, 2012, 1:00 p.m.-3:00 p.m.

Crown Hill Waiting Station
Boulevard at 34th Street

Admission is FREE and everyone is Welcome

Thomas Hamm has been director of special collections and professor of history at Earlham College in Richmond since 1987. A native of New Castle, he is a graduate of Butler University and received his doctorate in history from Indiana University. He has edited two volumes of abstracts of Indiana Quaker records published by the Indiana Historical Society, and is currently involved in a project with Ancestry.com to digitize Quaker records from around the United States. He is the author or editor of several other books. The most recent is "Quaker Writings, 1650-1920," published by Penguin Classics in New York City. Since 1989 he has lived in Spiceland with his wife Mary Louise.

For a PDF version of this announcement, click here

For more information about us, visit www.GenealogyIndy.org

For information on this program, email to: info@GenealogyIndy.org